Dear Brethren:

I regret having to write this letter and am embarrassed to state that after checking my schedule for the next several years, I discover that I do not have a meeting scheduled with you as I indicated in personal conversations during our recent gospel meeting.

It was a real pleasure to work with you and I enjoyed immensely our association, but I am unable to find any date that I thought had been scheduled for such a return effort. I must have confused Texas City with another place that I had been scheduled for two different years in the same letter. Unfortunately, I have no additional time available during the next three or four years. I regret leading you to believe that I had such a date scheduled and know that it must have sounded presumptuous to you. It was an honest mistake made without proper checking of my schedule.

Fraternally yours,

John Allen Chalk
